WHY PHILOSOPHY IN ARTS?

The purpose of a Masters Degree is to educate and train researchers who can contribute to the development of knowledge at an advanced level or prepare graduates for advanced and specialised professional employment.

The successful graduate will be able to deal with complex issues both systematically and creatively, make sound judgements using data and information at his/her disposal, and communicate conclusions clearly.

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

Research degrees build skills such as critical thinking, problem solving, statistics and data management, knowledge transfer and effective leadership.

Graduates may work in the public, private, or non-profit sectors, and take on roles like policy making and implementation, management, education and teaching, public health management, or research.
